Hello, my name is Posidonia

Holidaymakers or nearby residents, do you know who I am? Apparently, you don't. Very often, you criticize me and complain about me to your elected representatives. Let me introduce myself. My scientific name is POSIDONIA OCEANICA, commonly known as Posidonia.

If you look underwater, you probably got a glimpse of my elongated green-leaf hair swaying at the mercy of the waves. These tufts are called Posidonia Herbarium. My leaves dry out and are carried by the current, ending up as brownish heaps on the beach. In these masses, you can also find small fibrous balls that I lose in the autumn and which have been washed away by the sea. These natural elements prove the good health of the sea underwater world.

You may also want to know that Posidonia Herbarium protects the coast and the beaches against erosion. All the sediments on the shore help to protect our shores against the action of the sea. They form a cover which keeps the sand and protects the beach against sea blows. This is the reason why the village of Le Pradet keeps them on the beach as long as possible and, even if there is still a little left, even if I stick to your skin, I am not as dirty as you might think. I think that the water quality of the village is good and that I am here to protect what you wish to find next year for your holidays: a nice beach. So, enjoy your swim!
